

Everyday Leadership for the Entire Team

Presented by Lewis Associates

March 19th, 2019

Every individual has a unique set of experiences and talents that can help the company grow and prosper. The success of the company is largely based on its ability to identify, capture and utilize the talents of everyone on your team. Many people think that leadership is the domain of a few, such as those who hold positions of authority. Upon closer inspection, leadership is more about relationships than hierarchical position. In the world of work, relational leadership emerges at all levels and in all activities. It does not matter what your position, background or current role is--you are a leader. In any situation, you can take responsibility. Sometimes, leadership is simply doing the ordinary in extraordinary ways.
